

Carol Monticelli

Carol Monticelli (1977), is an architect, PhD in Technology and design for environmental quality on a building and urban scale and an associate professor of 2019 for the disciplines of the SSD ICAR/12 Architectural Technology. She conducts research with the TAN group (Textile Architecture Network) in connection with the activities of ClusTex, a multidisciplinary cluster on innovative textiles, within the TEXTILES Hub interdepartmental laboratory of the Politecnico di Milano. She carries out teaching activities for the disciplines of the ICAR/12 subjects in the Degree Courses of Architecture and Architectural Design, she has carried out teaching activities in the Environmental Architecture Degree Courses of the School of Architecture and Society of the Polytechnic of Milan and in the Course of Architecture sciences and Construction Architecture of the School of Civil Architecture of the Politecnico di Milano.

The research activity is characterized, on the one hand, by a constant interest in exploring the issues of eco-sustainable design of buildings and environmental impact in construction, with particular attention to the evaluation of environmental impacts of materials and technologies in the various phases of the building process, and on the other hand by an interest in the processes of technological and material innovation, in order to analyze the evolution in the use of traditional materials, dictated by the new performances and regulatory requirements, and the scenarios of application of new materials in the building sector.

The teaching activity is characterized by two main types of commitment and thematic studies. On the one hand - the teaching assignment of the course of Design of elements and systems and then of Technology of Architecture in the Laboratory of Architecture construction 1 (from aa. 2008-2009) - the thinking on the themes of living in the contemporary world, - the continuous renewal of needs and requirements, - the multiplicity of actors and the indispensable cultural references to the project, - the connections between economy and ecology constitute the theoretical presuppositions for a design experimentation conducted on the scale of residential buildings.

On the other hand, in the field of technological culture teaching of the Architectural Design Laboratory (2007-2008, academic year 2008-2009, aa. 2009-2010), in the first level degree of the Course of Degree in Architecture of Construction, and of Architectural Technology Fundamentals (ay 2014-2015, ay 2015-2017, ay 2016-2017) of the Master's Degree in Architecture - Architectural Design, the concepts concerning the phases were examined in depth verification projects, evaluation of material and technological choices in relation to compositional choices and performance compliance with the intended use of the projects, for the executive definition of some parts of the project.

Finally there is the activity of support to the elaboration of the doctoral theses (co-tutor of 4 PhD theses in Technology and Project for the Built Environment), of degree (speaker at 12 master degree thesis, co-supervisor of 4 Masters thesis (2 of them with honors), supervisor of 39 theses (7 of them with honors) of Bachelor Degree and co-supervisor of 9 Bachelor thesis starting from the academic year 2003-2004), intended as a privileged moment of deepening of energy and environmental issues linked to the optimization of the quality of building products and of construction techniques and technologies, and also as a moment of investigation of the environmental profile of technologies and materials, from traditional to the most innovative: themes that are the main interest of the activity scientific.
